

Our Unique Urban Waterway

Postcard circa 1910

The Gorge Waterway has provided people with food, shelter and an important transportation corridor for thousands of years. First Nations people travelled up the inlet to hunt deer, elk and waterfowl, harvesting fish and shellfish from the sea.

Regatta near Gorge Narrows circa 1890

In colonial times large crowds of Victorians gathered for regattas, swim meets and community celebrations along the Gorge.

Outriggers on the Gorge

Today the Gorge is still a popular destination for boating, fishing, walking and bird watching. Paddlers and rowers train and compete here, and many others enjoy recreational paddling on this beautiful waterway.
