New main park plaza features a Coastal Salish design (potentially a weaving pattern as shown), created through sandblasting, color, or tile. The plaza emphasizes the central axis of the site and provides space for market stalls.

Expanded park plaza areas are framed by native vegetation.

Native plant gardens frame the open lawn area.

Welcome poles at park entrance (potential)

Hard surface provides expanded space for market stalls along the south edge of the park. Decorative patterns in sandblasting, color, or tile emulate the natural forms of the site.

New bosque of trees adds structure to the expanded plaza area.

Relocated memorial magnolia tree

Loop pathway adjacent the expanded boardwalk includes interpretive signage and a seating node near the playground.

Public stage structure featuring carved First Nations elements features prominently in the center of the park.

Open lawn area provides space for a variety of recreational activities as well as seating for markets, festivals, and concerts.

Native plant gardens frame the open lawn area.

Relocated memorial cherry trees frame the new cenotaph axis.

Relocated cenotaph is centered along a new axis and framed by vegetation, creating a peaceful space for ceremonies and contemplation. Decorative paving provides opportunities for donor bricks.

New washroom facility with green roof.

Playground featuring the iconic horse rocker, contemporary and natural play components (nets, kinetic elements, boulders, loose materials, etc.) as well as picnic tables and benches. Large trees will potentially be retained.

Centennial Dock Approach Master Harbour

Fence split rail fence along north property line separates park space from adjacent parking lots.

Fenced in dog area for use on market days.

Relocated cenotaph is centered along a new axis and framed by vegetation, creating a peaceful space for ceremonies and contemplation. Decorative paving provides opportunities for donor bricks.

New washroom facility with green roof.

Playground featuring the iconic horse rocker, contemporary and natural play components (nets, kinetic elements, boulders, loose materials, etc.) as well as picnic tables and benches. Large trees will potentially be retained.

New main park plaza features a Coastal Salish design (potentially a weaving pattern as shown), created through sandblasting, color, or tile. The plaza emphasizes the central axis of the site and provides space for market stalls.

Expanded park plaza areas are framed by native vegetation.

Native plant gardens frame the open lawn area.

Welcome poles at park entrance (potential)

Hard surface provides expanded space for market stalls along the south edge of the park. Decorative patterns in sandblasting, color, or tile emulate the natural forms of the site.

New bosque of trees adds structure to the expanded plaza area.

Relocated memorial magnolia tree

Loop pathway adjacent the expanded boardwalk includes interpretive signage and a seating node near the playground.

Public stage structure featuring carved First Nations elements features prominently in the center of the park.

Open lawn area provides space for a variety of recreational activities as well as seating for markets, festivals, and concerts.

Native plant gardens frame the open lawn area.

Relocated memorial cherry trees frame the new cenotaph axis.

Relocated cenotaph is centered along a new axis and framed by vegetation, creating a peaceful space for ceremonies and contemplation. Decorative paving provides opportunities for donor bricks.

New washroom facility with green roof.

Playground featuring the iconic horse rocker, contemporary and natural play components (nets, kinetic elements, boulders, loose materials, etc.) as well as picnic tables and benches. Large trees will potentially be retained.

New main park plaza features a Coastal Salish design (potentially a weaving pattern as shown), created through sandblasting, color, or tile. The plaza emphasizes the central axis of the site and provides space for market stalls.

Expanded park plaza areas are framed by native vegetation.

Native plant gardens frame the open lawn area.

Welcome poles at park entrance (potential)

Hard surface provides expanded space for market stalls along the south edge of the park. Decorative patterns in sandblasting, color, or tile emulate the natural forms of the site.

New bosque of trees adds structure to the expanded plaza area.

Relocated memorial magnolia tree

Loop pathway adjacent the expanded boardwalk includes interpretive signage and a seating node near the playground.

Public stage structure featuring carved First Nations elements features prominently in the center of the park.

Open lawn area provides space for a variety of recreational activities as well as seating for markets, festivals, and concerts.

Native plant gardens frame the open lawn area.

Relocated memorial cherry trees frame the new cenotaph axis.

Relocated cenotaph is centered along a new axis and framed by vegetation, creating a peaceful space for ceremonies and contemplation. Decorative paving provides opportunities for donor bricks.

New washroom facility with green roof.

Playground featuring the iconic horse rocker, contemporary and natural play components (nets, kinetic elements, boulders, loose materials, etc.) as well as picnic tables and benches. Large trees will potentially be retained.